Piotrkowska Street

Piotrkowska Street is one of the longest shopping streets in Europe. Due to its unique buildings, the street has been entirely inscribed into the register of monuments. Along the street, we can find all objects that are specific to Łódź: eclectic tenements, industrialists' palaces and villas, factories, churches and memorials. A variety of architectonic styles from 19th and 20th century is represented here. Almost each house has its history written by its multicultural community. The interesting places are courtyards (this type of courtyard is called "the well"), in which you may find many restaurants, cafes, pubs and galleries.

Manufaktura

The 27 ha (67 ac) area of former Izrael Poznański's factory has a modern and unique arrangement nowadays. The complex comprises such places as: Museum of the Factory, ms² Museum of Art, restaurants, more than 250 shops, bowling alley, climbing wall, cinema, theatre and Vienna House hotel. The market place with the longest fountain in Poland is also here. Manufaktura has won many national and international awards for successful revitalization of a former factory complex.

OFF Piotrkowska

A gastronomical heart of the city beats today in the walls of old Franciszek Ramisch's factory. OFF Piotrkowska is the place where culture, art and good cuisine lovers along with representatives of creative industries meet. Music clubs, showrooms, artistic workshops, culinary studios and restaurants serving dishes from many corners of the world can be found here.

Palace of I. Poznański

The eclectic palace of Izrael Poznański is the largest industrialist’s residence in Poland. Noteworthy are both representative interiors, such as dining room and ballroom, and exhibitions of the Museum of Łódź City housed in the palace. For instance, the Pantheon of Great Citizens of Łódź presents profiles of famous people connected with Łódź: Julian Tuwim, Artur Rubinstein, Karl Dedecius, Aleksander Tansman, Jan Karski, Marek Edelman & Alina Margolis. An interesting project “On the common courtyard: Łódź’s melting pot of cultures and religions” recreates a house interior with three different flats resided by families of different cultures and nationalities

Murals

Łódź murals - large-format graffiti which already grew into the city landscape and changed the face of Łódź. Creating a unique gallery in urban space, they are known and admired not only in the country but also world-wide. On the walls in Łódź you may find over 160 works created by well-known artists and street art groups, such as DA Least, NUNCA, Os Gemeos, ROA or Etam Crew.

Industrialists' villas and palaces

Compared to other Polish cities, Łódź stands out with a great number of palaces and villas. There are more than a hundred of such objects. All of them were built in the 19th or early 20th century. They enrapture with variety and richness of architectonic styles as well as their original decorations and details. Many of them serve today as seats of municipal institutions, museums or universities. For instance, Herbst Palace a branch of Museum of Art nowadays – and its interiors are an illustration of former factory owners' lifestyle.

The White Factory

The facades of most factories in Łódź were mostly made from red bricks, but Ludwik Geyer decided to cover his classical building with white plaster, which must have added certain charm to it. In this textile plant first steam engine in Łódź was started. Nowadays, the building houses Central Museum of Textiles, which is famous for organizing the International Triennial of Tapestry – the oldest and greatest world exhibition of contemporary textile art. Next to the factory, there is Open-Air Museum of Wooden Architecture.

Piotrkowska 282

Museum of Art ms1 & ms2

The Museum of Art owns one of the most interesting and richest collections of the 20th and 21st century art in Europe. The exhibition includes the priceless International Collection of Modern Art, initiated by artists of the a.r. group: Władysław Strzemiński and Katarzyna Kobro and created through their donations. The museum presents the works of well-recognized avant-garde artists from Poland and around the world. The Museum of Art is housed in Maurycy Poznański's palace (36 Więckowskiego St.) and its branch ms² is located in the Manufaktura centre (19 Ogrodowa St.)
